Dear Dr. Butler:

I write you in regards to manuscript # ZOJ-05-2025-6361 entitled "Revealing the arboreal frog genus Auparoparo: A new classification after 130 years of Oreophryne sensu lato, subfamily Asterophryinae (Anura: Microhylidae)" which you submitted to the Zoological Journal of the Linnean Society. I apologise for the delay in making an initial decision about your manuscript.

We currently have a backlog of papers awaiting publication and review. As such, I am only able to accept a small proportion of the new manuscripts we receive. In this case, I regret to tell you that I am not able to consider your manuscript for publication.

This is not a comment on the scientific merit of your study, but reflects the large number of manuscripts that we are currently receiving. As a result, many are rejected at this stage without review.

Thank you for considering the Zoological Journal of the Linnean Society for the publication of your research. I wish you success in finding an alternative journal in which to publish your work.

Sincerely,

Dr Jeff Streicher

Editor in Chief, Zoological Journal of the Linnean Society
